
EXPRESSIONS

Along with these testimonies and acknowledgments of our departed sister, I would like to leave these words, also. My first acquaintance with the family of Bell was her husband, Jimmy, who was such a bosom friend to my father who has gone on. And then coming of years, I become a minister and was acquainted with Sister Bell, and know her as a real devout Christian. We will all miss her, everywhere. It's so easy to say words over someone like this, because you don't have to pull back anything. She was what was required to be a Christian.

2 When I heard the sister sing, a few moments ago, it just remind me so much of her singing, as we know her around here. She loved singing. I'm so glad that this was done, for it truly made how Sister Bell would have felt. She'd like to expressed herself in that way. My prayer, and sincere prayer is, that we will all come to the end of the road with a testimony like she had.

3 I wish to read some out of the Scripture here, just a portion. I feel that she was such a great lover of God's Word, and His Word is so Eternal. And I thought I would read a portion of the 14th chapter—of Job.

Man that is born of a woman is of a few days, and full of trouble.

He cometh forth like a flower, and is cut down: he fleeth also as a shadow, and continueth not.

. . . does thou open thine eyes upon such an one, and bringest me into judgment with thee?

Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean? not one.

Seeing his days are determined, the number of his months are with thee, thou has appointed him bounds that he cannot pass;

Turn from him, that he may rest, till he has accomplished, as an hireling, his day.

For there is hope of a tree, if it be cut down, that it will sprout again, and that the tender branches thereof will not cease.

Though the root thereof wax old in the earth, and the stock thereof dieth in the ground;

Yet through the scent of water it will bud, and bring forth . . . like a plant.

But man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, . . . giveth up the ghost, and where is he?

As the waters fail from the sea, and the floods decay and dry up:

So man lieth down, and rises not: till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raisen out of their sleep.

O that thou would hide me in the grave, that thou would appoint me a secret, until the days of thy wrath be past, . . .

If a man die, shall he live again? all the days of my appointed time will I wait, till my change come. I. . .

Thou shall call, . . . I will answer thee: thou will have a desire to do a work of thine hand.

For now thou numberest my steps: . . . thou does watch over my sin?

⁵ There's so much of life that's expressions. And there is no one that lives on earth but what some time in his life he's got to stop and think of where he come from, what's his purpose here, and where he's going hereafter. Everyone likes, would like to look beyond the curtain.

⁸ And Job, the prophet, as he was thinking on these things, he detected it in botany, plant life, tree life. So he was noticing that, how that God must be in His creation; that if He made the creation, then He must live in the creation, because He made it for a purpose, for Himself to live in, like a house that a man would build. These teeny little lives that's in all of God's creation is subject to its Maker. And he was thinking, that, if a storm came by and would ring down a mighty tree, yet, that wasn't the end of that tree. It would live again. If the tree died, it would live.

⁹ And many times, when we are flusterated, if we would just look around us, you can see God everywhere. Now we'll take Him, like in the tree, if the tree is put here.

¹⁰ And everything is here to serve a purpose, just as we are here to serve a purpose, just as our sister was here to serve a purpose. We're all here for a purpose of God, if we can find what that purpose is and then serve it well. There, surely, if God is mindful enough of a resurrection of botany life, He's mindful enough of a resurrection for human life.

11 So Job noticed, the patriarch, that—that the tree, if it died, it lived again. And how that summer and winter changed its beings, and each day there left a testimony. He noticed if the—the tree was living in the summertime, and seemingly in the wintertime it died, the leaves that hung on the tree.

12 Now, we are taught in the Scripture, that, there is a Tree of Life. It was in the garden of Eden. And this Tree of Life is where Christians hang, as a leaf on this Tree.

13 And now in the wintertime, when the leaves are pretty, why, they . . . Or, in the summertime, rather, when the leaves are pretty and green, after while frost comes and colors them different colors, and they fall from the tree. And the life goes back into the root of the tree. If we just notice, it's a mysterious thing.

14 Here some time ago, I was confronted, to speak to a man who claimed to be an infidel, an unbeliever. And we were standing by an apple tree which belonged to him. And I asked him how old the tree was, and he told me so many years, and how many bushels of apples it produced each year. And this was in the early part of August, and I knew, noticed the apples were already falling, and the leaves were turning brown. And I said to him, "I'd like to ask you a question." I said, "Why are those leaves turning brown and falling off of the tree before any frost hits them?"

15 "Well," he said, "it's winter coming on. And the reason that they turn brown is because the life has left the leaf."

I said, "Where did the life go?"

16 And he said to me, "Back to the root of the tree, where it come from."

And I said, "Is that the last of the leaf?"

17 He said, "No. That life will return next spring again, with a new leaf." He had never noticed it before.

18 I said, "Then, I pray you tell me, sir, what Intelligence takes that leaf off the tree even before cold weather, and sends its life back down into the ground, for safety, until the coming forth of another season. You could put water in a bucket and set it on a post, it will never change by the season. So it shows that there is a God Who masters life."

19 And we who are claim to be Christians, who are born of the Spirit of God, has been, by the grace of God, transferred from a tree of death to a tree of Life. And when one of the leaves drops off, like I heard that testimony from the . . . this wonderful church, to the Gilt Edge Baptist church, where many of my precious friends are members, where one of its leaves has dropped off. We know that that life has gone back to the God Who gave it for some purpose, only to come again in the general resurrection; never drop again, in the Millennium. The great time is coming.

²⁰ Job had noticed these things. Then he noticed in the life of the sun.

²¹ If you'll notice, of a morning, the sun comes up, it's a baby. Its rays are weak. Then it comes into its teen age, about nine or ten o'clock. Then in the noontime, the middle of the day, it's in its strength. Then it begins to fall, and finally sets again over in the West, as it dies out for the day. Could we call that the end of the sun? No. The next morning, it comes back up again, to bring a new day for us.

²² Now, what is this? It's God's expression. And the word expression means "to make known a feeling." It's God's expressive . . . expression to us, to let us know His feeling for us, that death does not separate us Eternally. We'll rise again, come back again.

²³ Every time that the seed dies in the earth, in the fall of the year, just like these flowers, they, the little seeds drop out of them when frost strikes them, and the seed goes down onto the ground. And as strange as it may seem, yet it is the truth, God is so infinite that He doesn't overlook anything. He has a funeral procession for His flower. After the frost strikes them, then comes the fall rains, and great big tears, of drops of rain, drops from the heaven, and buries that flower seed, pats upon it, and maybe it goes an inch or two beneath the earth. Then the cold winter winds begin to sweep, and—and the little petals are gone, and the stalk is gone, and then the bulb freezes and dries up. And then the little seed freezes, and the pulp runs out of it. And, why, by time of spring, you can't find anything left of it.

²⁴ But is that the end of the flower? Never. It was put here for a purpose. And when it has served its purpose well, then God letting us know, by the flower, His expression to us.

27 Because, God is expressing to us, showing us just what He's doing. His purpose is to show us, through the flowers, through the sun, through the trees, through all life, that He is the resurrection and the Life. God resurrects His Life when it serves His purpose.

28 And if the flower serves its purpose, and God has a resurrection for the flower, how much more for our sister who serve her purpose in life. God has a resurrection for those that serves their purpose. We can find our purpose and then serve them.

29 These little flowers, you might ask about them. They are here, this afternoon, to serve a purpose. That's what these flowers, God had them for, to serve a purpose. On and on it could go.

30 If you notice, these flowers are not all the same color of flowers. They different in color, showing that God is a God of variety. He likes different colors. Mixing it together makes the bouquet that He loves. God, a God of variety. He has His white flowers. He has His red flowers. And His, all colors of flowers, and putting them together serves His purpose.

31 He has big mountains, and little hills, and plain. He has deserts. He has sea. He has the oak tree, the palm tree. Everything blending together in its place, where, God, the God of all nature can live and enjoy His being, as living in His creatures in time, that's serving His purpose.

32 If He thinks enough to resurrect that, and made a way of an escape for that, for service in the future again, how much more has He of people, regardless of who we are, what race, color, creed, or what-more, that can dwell together in the unity of God's Presence and His blessing. There will be a resurrection, some day, just as sure as there's a resurrection for the flower. We all see that. We all believe that. We all know that these things are all expression. They are testifying, telling us, making, knowing a feeling that God wants us to know.

33 People who sent these flowers, the friends of our sister who sent these flowers, they're also making known to the family, expressing to them that their feeling of sympathy of a friend, of a sister, or—or loved one. They are trying to express. They are expressions, making known, declaring something.

34 All these things that we could speak of, for hours, the expressions of God to the human race, all these have their part, and they play it well. Every flower, every tree, every sunrise, every sunset, everything plays its part well. But all of those expressions of God, making known to us, and giving us an example, that He was going to make a great expression some day, an Eternal expression.

35 Then He sent us His expressed image, in the form of His Son. God sent His Son, in the expressed image of Himself, to declare to the human race what He thought of us. He changed His cast. He become man. He become one of us.

36 From God, the Eternal Father, from the great Creator Who, before there was a world, filled all space, time. There was not even a—a meter or a light meter, neither was there an atom or a molecule, He was still God. And He will always be God. But the great One Who . . . If you could look up at night and see the stars in the solar system. Some years ago, I had the privilege to look through this big scope, and where they claim you could see a hundred and twenty million years of light space, light meters. And beyond that is still moons and stars and worlds, that He controls.

37 And then He was so mindful enough to make an expression to us, knowing that He is so great. Yet, He came down in the form of a human being, to express what He was. He became a Man of sorrow, acquainted with grief. He lived a human life. He had no place to lay His head. He was expressing what It, what God was. He healed our sick when we were sick. He raised up the dead, to show that He was God's expressed image. He laid a plan down for us all, that where we too could look at these small expression and see God. Then we could look up and see God's great expression, and have the assurance, then, that when these hours come, this isn't the end of it.

38 I like the expression that our sister, in singing, said a few moments ago, "This is my sister. I could not sing it this way" unless she knew where she was. See?

39 There is a way we know where we're going, because the expressed image of God laid down this plan. And, He said, whosoever would accept this plan would have Eternal Life. John 5:24 said, "He that heareth My Words, and believeth on Him that sent Me, has everlasting Life, and shall not come into the Judgment; but has passed from death unto Life."

40 The greatest expression of all was Jesus Christ, Who made a way for us. He fulfilled and vindicated all the expressions that these flowers, and botany life, and so forth, and the sun, and the solar system, has witnessed before His Coming, that there was coming a Just One that would make us firmly believe It, because He would be the expressed image of God. And when He came, and did what He did, He proved that these expressions was right. He gave vindication to them. Because, as a flower raises again, the tree raises again, the sun raises again, so shall the Christian rise again. It has to. Because, God, in the expressed image of a human being, or a human being in the expressed image of God, proved it by His resurrection.

41 Then, in there, when the prophet saw these things take place; Job, when he saw all the botany life, and so forth. Then, we who are familiar with the Bible knows it. Setting on this heap of ashes, in distress, trouble had struck him. His church members had told him that he was a . . . had secretly sinned.

42 Many time it's been said, that, "A person dies prematurely, or something, that may be some sin they did. They did something wrong." Not . . . That isn't the case to a Christian.

43 When he saw this great, final expression, God making known His plan through Jesus Christ, he cried with a voice. When the lightnings flashed and the thunders roared, he said, "I know my Redeemer liveth, and at the last days He will stand upon the earth. And though after the skin worm has destroyed my body, yet in my flesh I'll see God, Whom I shall see for myself." He saw that final expression, many hundreds of years ahead. But, being a prophet, in the vision he saw the coming of God's great expression.

44 He could look down and see the resurrection of the seeds. He could see the resurrection of the trees. And the resurrection of the sun, after it had served its time, and raised again; served for a day, raised for another day. Flowers for one funeral service, die, and resurrect for another's funeral service. Everything serving its purpose. Then he saw, in the distance, the Coming of that Just One, and screamed, "I know my Redeemer liveth."

45 "My flesh shall rest in hope," said David, "because He will not suffer His Holy One to see corruption; neither will He leave His soul in hell." He saw that day, that perfect expression of God, what He was going to do; to make known, to man, that death is not the end of the road.

46 This is not the end. This is the beginning. It's the end of sorrow. It's the end of time of decision. But it's beginning of time of joy and reward. It's not the end of everything. It's just the end of the—of the mortal things, to begin the immortal thing. She has gone to her rest. God rest her soul.

47 Now, he cried this great expression, because he seen what was going to happen.

48 Now let us come to this conclusion. We have gathered here today, to—to express, or to make known our feeling about a neighbor, about a sister, about a wife, about a mother. That's why we have gathered this afternoon; to make known, to express our feeling, our loss. That's why we are here, to do this. The father is to express the loss of the wife; the children, the mother; the neighbor, or the sister.

⁴⁹ We ministers. As I heard them, down through the building, giving those wonderful, glorious, comforting comments, clear cut, that what the sister had meant to them, and in their congregation. We ministers come, this afternoon. Course, in our hearts, we feel sad, too. But we've come to make known an expression of God, too, His Truth about all this matter. We've come to express what God says about it, to comfort the hearts of the people; to let them know, as hard as the shock may be, yet it's in the providence of Almighty God to do it this way, and it's His plan. And this isn't the end. This is the beginning of a new life.

⁵⁰ Then we who God teaches in His Word, about these things, we come to give our expression. And how happy I am over this one this afternoon, that we all can express the same thing towards the Word of God, because she fulfilled It.

⁵² Sister Bell, as we know her, was not ashamed of her testimony. Not one time was there any blushing of her testimony. Not one time was she reluctant to say something. She expressed it, and she wasn't ashamed. How I've seen her stand back there with her hands in the air, and the tears running down her cheeks. See her standing here on this pulpit, and sing songs that would make the whole church go into a scream, of a Land, be way beyond here. She wasn't ashamed. She give her expression everywhere. Every neighbor, every church, everywhere she was affiliated, she made herself known, expressed what she thought about God. Was her life, all that she could be, she expressed what she was in Christ Jesus, a new-born creature.

⁵⁴ What a wonderful thing it is, to see the expressions, how God does. Her letters; Sister Bell. Every time I would come home, Billy, my son, would bring me a group of letters, telephone calls, constantly, from Sister Bell. "Pray for this one. Pray for that one." That, what was it doing? To me, that's her expression, her making known what was on the inside of her; a burden for her fellow man, a burden for her children, a burden for every one that was around, and every sick person.

55 Sister Bell almost lived by the grace of God, the last few years. She was a faithful believer in God's healing power. And it so happened the other night . . . I've never in my life had prayer for her, and prayed with that dear old saint, until, unless God healed her.

56 And the other night, when I was called, I just got in from Arizona, about around midnight. They called my son and said, "Sister Shepherd, a friend of Sister Bell's, wants you to pray for her. She's in the hospital." I understood it to be Sister Shepherd; some lady, perhaps in the building now, by the name of Shepherd, that she knew. I thought she was in the hospital.

57 The next morning they called back, about eleven something, and said, "It's not Sister Shepherd. It is Sister Bell, herself, is in the hospital." And to see that, the wise providence and plan of God. Before he could ever get there, Sister Bell had done climbed the golden Stairs. Before I could get there, God had plucked His rose of color, to make His bouquet for the Millennium. Before I could ever get there, she was gone to meet God. God's expression of His love!

58 All these years of happy marriage was an expression of her loyalty as a wife, to make a home for her husband and her children. That expressed itself through the hard times, when little fellows around the table, and hard going. And, a mother, takes a mother to know how to put things together, to make it last—last, when little hungry mouths are around the table. But, stand by her husband, loyal, stand by her children, it was an expression of genuine loyalty. That's before every one of you. I wouldn't have to say that. You know that to be the truth. See? Yes, sir.

59 And her never-failing plea for her children! I don't believe I ever met her, or left her, without her asking a request for those children. That showed real motherhood, knowing that life is merely a dream or a preparation place. For her children, she wanted to meet them in a Land beyond here, where there would be no more hard times. She constantly would say to me . . . She called me Brother Billy. She would say, "Brother Billy, pray for my children, none of them will be lost." If that isn't expressing real motherhood; a mother who is interested in her children, interested in her neighbors, her husband, her loved one! It's God in the woman, expressing Eternal things.

60 How I sympathize with her husband, my good friend. How I sympathize with them boys, to hear a message of some of them in Germany and different places, a mother is gone. But she might be gone from your presence here, boys, but she's not—she's not dead. She's alive for evermore. She's a living in a Land to where she prayed that each of you would meet her. Don't let her be disappointed. I'm sure she won't.

⁶² Another thing that expressed God's love. As I understand, that, her request was that she'd never be old and linger along, have to linger and be packed around in old age, and crippled up and—and sickly, and dying by inches. God granted that request. That's right. Why, just couple Sundays ago, she was standing here on a church pew, singing the glorious Gospel of Christ.

⁶³ What's this? What's this of a mother, looked like, prematurely, about sixty-five years old, going? What does that mean? It's God expressing Himself, that, "He will not withhold no good thing from them that will walk upright before Him." God, expressing in her very death, is God expressing to us, that He's God, and He will give those the desire of His heart, their heart, that'll walk upright before Him.

⁶⁴ Seeing this, that He is God, and we must all come to this place, then let us look at His tokens of expressions. His love, His Church, His people, and everything that it is, is all God's expressions to us. Then I think we all should bow our heads in humility and thank God for this life that, through Christ, has conquered even death itself.

⁶⁵ And then the Words of Jesus when He went to Jairus' daughter, "She is not dead, but she sleepeth." She's gone to her sleep, and not to her death. For she died many years ago, as a little girl, and now she lives in Christ; and only asleep, to us, but awake with Christ.

⁶⁶ Let us bow our heads then and give thanks for this gallant life.

⁶⁷ Heavenly Father, of course You know our hearts, of course You know the thoughts in our mind. You know all about us. We're the Creation of Your hand. You know we're sorry to see Sister Bell be taken from us. But, God, we are bowing our heads and hearts, in gratefulness that her request was granted, and that Your desire for her was fulfilled. That, even here at the end of the road, when her obituary is written in the life of everybody she come in contact with, that she was Your servant. Long may her influence live in the hearts of all who know her. God, we pray that You will rest her gallant soul in that Land that she loved, and talked about and sang of, all these years.

68 I pray for Jimmy, this afternoon, Lord. When I see him setting there, and he's expressing his thoughts as the crystallly tears rolls down his cheek. He's thinking of a loyal wife. And of these children who, the tears running down their cheeks, they are thinking of a lovely mother. And we pray, God, that You'll bless them. Comfort their hearts. Reach out that Hand, that beyond the reach of anything else, that can go to the human heart, and give to them this great satisfaction, that someday we'll meet again, and we'll never have another funeral service There.

69 Bless her loved ones, her brothers, her sisters, her grandchildren, and her neighbors.

70 And these churches, Lord, we know how they loved her. As she walked among us, they, she has walked among them. And together, with them, Lord, we—we share this great mutual feeling, that we loved her. And we're here expressing our—our—our gratitude to You, for her life.

71 Mold us, Lord, and make us, that we, too, when we come to the end of the road, may be ready to meet You. Forgive our many sins, O Eternal God. Have mercy upon us, Lord, for we are weak and weary.

72 And I pray that You will give us comfort, this afternoon. May we find it in these words that's been expressed from Your Word, through the different ministers, and those who are ordained to bring such, and through the neighbors and friends. May we find in there, with the testimony of—of the flowers, and the trees, and the sunshine, the leaves, and—and above all, with the Presence of the Holy Spirit, which witnesses the resurrection of Christ. "I will not leave you comfortless. I'll pray the Father, and He'll give you another Comforter, and He will abide forever." Oh, how we love Him, Lord! And how we appreciate You sending Him to us, to give us this blessed assurance in the hours and time of trouble.

Now give us strength for the further coming of the service.

73 I want to ask a special, Lord, just now for these boys setting here in the uniform. Blessed be those boys, as they'll have to return back unto their ranks. But I pray, Lord, that on that day . . . We appreciate these uniforms they wear now. But may mother's prayer be answered: may they be dressed in the holiness and righteousness of Jesus Christ, at that day. The girls, and all together, Lord, that's what we want to be, the Christian soldiers, real strong faith. Guide us and direct us until that day, Lord, when we meet again.

74 We thank You for her life now, and pray that You'll be with all of us until we all meet at Thy feet. In Jesus' Name we ask it. Amen.
